Issues for Quality Enhancement and Harmonization of Education in East Africa

Mussa Mohamed, Anjum Halai, Simon Karuku

Abstract

This chapter provides a description of the historical and political development of the current mass education system in East Africa. It goes on to provide a comparative analysis of the structure of the school education system in the East African countries, Kenya, Rwanda, Tanzania and Uganda. Finally, on the basis of the historical and comparative analysis of the education system the chapter raises questions for harmonization of the education system in the partner states in the East African Community.

References

1. Arunsi, N. O. (1971). The library and adult education in Tanzania: A survey. In A.-B. Wallenius (Ed.), Libraries in East Africa (pp. 83–124). Uppsala: Scandinavia Institute of African Studies.Google Scholar

2. Brock-Utne, B. (2006). Whose education for all? The recolonization of the African mind. San Diego, CA: Africana Books.Google Scholar

3. East African Community (2012). Regional report: Harmonisation of the East African education systems and training curricula. Retrieved January 24, 2015 from http://www.eac.int/education/index.php?option=com_content&id=73&Itemid=145.

4. East African Community (2014). East African Community facts and figures—2014. Retrieved January 23, 2015 from http://www.eac.int/statistics/index.php?option=com_docman&Itemid=153.

5. Galabawa, C. J. (1990). Implementing educational policies in Tanzania. Washington, D.C.: World Bank.Google Scholar

6. Gottneid, A. J. (Ed.). (1976). Church and education in Tanzania. Nairobi: East African Publishing.Google Scholar

7. Jimenez, E., & Lockheed, M. (1995). Public and private secondary education in developing countries: A comparative study. Washington, DC: The World Bank.CrossRefGoogle Scholar

8.   Lawuo, Z. (1975). The implementation of British colonial education: Policy in Tanganyika, 1919–1939. Dar es Salaam: University of Dar es Salaam Press.Google Scholar

9.   Masudi, A. (1995). The role of donors and non-governmental organizations in primary education. Papers in Education and Development, 16, 105–116.Google Scholar

10. Mbiti, J. S. (1970). African religions and philosophy. London: Heinemann.Google Scholar

11. Merriam, E. O. (2007). Learning in adulthood: A comprehensive guide. San Francisco, CA: Jossey-Bass.Google Scholar

12. Moumouni, A. (1968). Education in Africa. New York: Praeger.Google Scholar

13. Omari, I. M., & Mosha, H. J. (1987). The quality of primary education in Tanzania. Nairobi: Man Graphics Limited.Google Scholar

14. UNDP (2014). UN human development report, 2014. Retrieved September 6, 2014 from http://hdr.undp.org/sites/default/files/hdr14-report-en-1.pdf.

15. UNECA/UNESCO (1961). Final report: Conference of African states on the development of education in Africa. Addis Ababa: UNESCO Publishing.Google Scholar

16. Wasonga, T. A. (2012). Perspectives on K-12 learning and teacher preparation in East Africa. In O. N. Ukpokodu & P. Ukpokodu (Eds.), Contemporary voices from the margin: African educators on African and American education (pp. 129–148). Charlotte, NC: Information Age Publishing.Google Scholar

17. World Bank. (2011). A regional exploration of pathways towards harmonization of math and science curriculum in the East Africa Community: Discussion paper. Washington, D.C.: World Bank.Google Scholar

18. World Bank (2014). Countries' reports. Retrieved September 6, 2014 from http://www.worldbank.org/en/country.